I am in a state of disbelief that the FCC is actually considering letting people use their cell phones while flying. As a flight attendant, I am afraid that cell phones will be used by terrorists on my airplane, communicating information that could undermine all the security precautions that we have put into place to make sure another 9/11 doesn't happen. Evacuating an airplane in an emergency will be disastrous. Cell phones are not allowed in other businesses where multiple users can invade someone's right to privacy, and inside an airplane is one of the tightest of quarters. If every single person who has a cell phone is talking at once, will it interfere with cockpit communications and safety? We just don't know, so DO NOT ALLOW THIS!!
